Kim Fields, best known in her role as roller skating preteen, “Tootie”, will speak at Talladega College on February 3, 2016 at the Black History Month Convocation.

Kim Fields currently lives in Atlanta with her husband, Christopher Morgan and their 8 year-old and 2-old sons. A pop culture icon and veteran actress/director, Kim became a household name after starring in several hit sitcoms including “Facts of Life” and “Living Single.” Although Ms. Fields may be new to the reality television world by joining Bravo’s mega hit, “The Real Housewives of Atlanta”, she is no stranger to being in the global spotlight.

Ms. Fields continues to lead a busy life by regularly appearing in film, television and theatre productions. When she's not in front of the camera, directing and producing projects, or speaking and motivating audiences, Kim is constantly working to grow her brand(s). Between creating several scripted projects and the holiday entertainment brand Holiday Love (holidaylove365.com), directing well-known shows including Tyler Perry's "House of Payne" and "Meet The Browns" and launching her own entertainment network, Refresh Networks, she is a woman of many talents. She is authoring two inspirational books, launching a maternity line and family activity zones. Now in her 40th year in entertainment, Kim strives to maintain the work/life balance. Although Ms. Fields continues to juggle her demanding career and multiple business ventures, she always maintains keeping her faith and family a top priority.

The oldest private Historically Black College in Alabama, Talladega College was founded in 1867 by two former slaves, William Savory and Thomas Tarrant. The College has an aggressive tradition of bringing the world to Talladega. Home of the Hale Woodruff Amistad Murals, the murals are on a nationwide tour where it is estimated to be seen by over a half million people and has received rave reviews from the New York Times.
